1. Homes today and in living memory

The outside of homes looked quite similar to the homes we might see today.

The inside of homes looked different when your grandparents and great-grandparents were children!

2. Homes in our community

Let's use our detective skills to find out about how Mr. Henty lived in the past.

3. Victorian homes

Today, we are going to take a big jump back in time, and learn about homes in the Victorian period.

4. Tudor homes

The Tudor period gets its name because it was the time when the Tudor family were the kings and queens of England.

5. Medieval homes

The medieval period covers a very, very long time! There were many kings and queens from lots of families during the period.

6. Prehistoric homes

Historians describe this time as the prehistoric period.

It covers a very, very, very long time, from when the very first humans walked the Earth.
